If you have new goals, it's time to acquire new skills. SAIT Polytechnic offers a wide-variety of continuing-education options to suit people with big aspirations and busy schedules. Our evening, weekend and distance-learning programs are designed and taught by experienced instructors, who are focused on getting you ahead in your career. Daytime Fast-Track and Pre-Employment programs allow you to step up your career advancement.

The following are just a few of the great programs that SAIT offers for individuals looking to further their career or begin a new one. Registration is now open for winter courses. For a more comprehensive list, visit sait.ca.

FAST-TRACK PROGRAMS - JANUARY START

Fast-Track programs are accelerated full-time programs ranging from 4 to 10 months in length. Small class sizes and a curriculum tied to industry needs are additional advantages of Fast-Track study. To be accepted into a Fast-Track program you must apply to full-time studies at sait.ca.

Database Administrator

The 40-week Database Administrator program offers you a well-rounded and industry-supported curriculum through the integration of technical and business requirements in database development and administration.

Non-Destructive Testing Foundations

The Non-Destructive Testing Foundations program is a great way to launch a career in the Non-Destructive Testing industry. Identifying potential mechanical and structural failure can save time, money, and lives. This nationally recognized 12-week program covers the main testing methods used in industry including radiography, radiation safety, and ultraspnics

Railway Conductor

This 15-week hands on certificate program will help you to start your career in operations in the Canadian railway industry. With high starting wages and room for growth, it is a great time to get your career on track.

Sterile Processing Technician

Available either in-class (21 weeks) or by distance education (6 months - 2 years), this certificate program provides entry-level training for the critical role of cleaning, packaging, sterilizing, storing and handling supplies and instruments for the health care environment.

PRE-EMPLOYMENT FOR SKILLED TRADES - JANUARY START

Pre-employment programs are a great way to kick-start an education in apprenticed skilled trades. These programs provide hands-on training, range from six to 18 weeks in length and give individuals the requirements to qualify as an apprentice.

Pre-Employment Carpentry

Get started in the carpentry trade. Cover all the course material received by a first year carpenter apprentice, as well as additional hands-on skills and safety training. This program will prepare you to enter the workforce as an apprentic. Upon successful completion of the program, you can write the first year Carpenter Apprenticeship Exams.

Pre-Employment Plumber

Hands-on training includes the installation of common plumbing configurations into mockup spaces built to resemble residential and commercial job sites. The program will prepare you to enter the workforce as an apprentice. Upon successful completion of the program, you can write the first-year Plumber Apprenticeship Exam.

CONSTRUCTION

Instructors with real-world experience give students an advantage when looking to further their career or get started in a new field. Our programs focus on giving students the hands-on training that ensures they have everything they need to excel.

AVEVA PDMS

Learn to produce 3D process equipment and piping design using the AVEVA PDMS Design Module. Create and manipulate 3D models for a process plant.

Revit Architecture Fundamentals

Revit Architecture Fundamentals will enable students to create full 3D architectural project models and set them up in working drawings. The course is focused on design development tools – building the 3D model with walls, windows, doors, floors, roofs and stairs as well as creating reflected ceiling and furniture plans.

ACADEMIC UPGRADING

Pursue new career opportunities by enrolling in Academic Upgrading courses in English, mathematics and the sciences. Offered days, evenings and online, Academic Upgrading courses help you meet entrance requirements for admission into SAIT career programs. They may also be accepted for admission by other post-secondary institutions in Alberta.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE FOUNDATIONS

English language and communication courses at SAIT prepare new Canadians and international students for success in other SAIT programs and for future employment. These courses focus on enhancing proficiency in English speaking, pronunciation, listening, reading and writing.

HEALTH AND SAFETY

At SAIT, we offer specialized part-time training for health professionals in CPR, first aid, workplace safety and more. If you are looking to enter the health care field, we also offer courses in Anatomy and Physiology, Medical Terminology and more.

Whether you see yourself crunching numbers, debating the merits of a new brand-campaign or simply finding an outlet for your outstanding organizational skills, we've got a program for you. Our wide-array of business programs offer in-depth training in accounting, management, marketing and administration.

Accelerated Accounting Certificate and Diploma

Develop the problem-solving skills needed to be a successful accountant. You can start with our 10-course certificate program and then complete the Diploma while putting your learning into practice on the job. If you aspire to a professional accounting designation, you can rest assured our courses are recognized by both the CGA and CMA.

Applied Management Certificate of Achievement

This flexible program provides interactive, professional-development workshops that build critical management skills. It's recognized by the Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board for a Blue Seal designation (for Journeyman).

Certified General Accountants (CGA) Partnership Program

SAIT's unique partnership with CGA Alberta enables us to offer part-time, non-degree students, taking Level 4 and PACE Level CGA courses (with a minimum grade of C+), the opportunity to receive full transfer credit and/or eligibility to write the CGA National exam(s), if required.

Forum for International Trade Training (FITTskills) Certificate and Diploma

This program offers the education you'll need to advance your international trade career and succeed in the new, global-business market. It's offered in conjunction with the Forum for International Trade Training (FITT). In total the FITTskills program consists of eight courses, which can be taken either as a series or individually.

Management Certificate of Achievement

Advance your career by developing the skills valued by managers in today's competitive market. This program includes courses in leadership development, marketing essentials, organizational behaviour and financial management. It is also recognized by the Alberta Apprenticeship and Industry Training Board for a Blue Seal designation (for Journeyman).

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY

SAIT programs will enable you to gain the skills you need to excel in the high-demand Information Technology industry. You can improve your technical skills or learn new ones. Regardless of your goals, we have a program designed with your needs in mind.

IT Security Certificate of Achievement

Learn how to keep a network safe. From perimeter security to desktops, we'll show you how to ensure that information stays private. You'll learn how to protect against internal and external threats, safeguard information systems and keep business network systems running smoothly.

Virtual Systems Management Certificate of Achievement

Blast kills trio of Albertans

Five Canadians dead, eight injured in hotel blast
 Explosion also kills two employees, injures 10 others

The town of Drumheller is mourning the loss of a father and son from its hockey community after an explosion at a Mexican resort yesterday.

The explosion occurred in the lobby of the 676-room Grand Princess Riviera Hotel in the city of Playa del Carmen around 9:30 a.m. local time.

Linda Lacher, president of the Drumheller Minor Hockey Association, was informed last night that Atom Tier 5 team manager Chris Charmont, 41, and his son John, 9, who played forward on the team, died in the blast that also claimed another Albertan.

"This won't just affect the hockey community, this will have an impact on the whole community," Lacher told Metro.

"We all know each other and we're all connected in one way or another."

Lacher described Chris Charmont as a tireless volunteer, involved in the hockey scene for several years, and someone who's contribution will be missed.

Lacher said the Charmont family of four was on vacation at the time.

The explosion left a crater a metre deep inside the building.

It also blew out windows and hurled pieces of stone paving and glass shards about 50 metres onto the palm-fringed lawn of the compound.

Eight Canadians were reported injured, including two listed in critical condition.

Bar patrons arrested over threat

An altercation outside of a Calgary bar resulted in the arrests of three people Saturday night.

After being denied entry into the Rusty Cage Bar because he failed to produce identification, a man allegedly pulled a gun on a doorman.

According to police, the man pushed the gun into the doorman's chest and uttered a threat. The man and a second male patron fled but were later located. A 9 mm handgun and a replica 9 mm handgun were found in the vehicle.

The two males a female driver were arrested and charged with weapon related offences. • METRO

New year, new auditor?

◆ Former city auditor Tracy McTaggart fired in June following an external review of her office ◆ City used external search firm to find replacement

The city is on track to having a new city auditor in place in the new year, according to council members.

Ald. Gord Lowe, who sits on the audit committee, said that after months of going through the selection process, committee will receive a recommendation on Thursday.

"We have to have a city auditor — and the sooner the better, obviously," he said.

Following issues with the previous city auditor, including allegations of fraud and confrontation with the city manager, Ald. Brian Pincott, chairman of the committee, said he doesn't foresee council making any changes.

Pincott said the city is looking for someone that will execute the goals laid out for them. "I think hiring a new

"I think hiring a new city auditor is hiring the person that ... we are recommending as being the best candidate to execute the mandate of our city auditor and execute an audit plan," he said.

"At the end of the day we're looking for a person who will deliver what we are looking for, which is, you know what, some pretty significant audits ...

Next steps

- The recommendation for a new auditor will be presented to council later this month.
- If approved by council, the city will then make an offer to the prospective candidate.

It will be a relief to have a new city auditor in place."

Somali pirates free kidnapped British couple

• We are happy to be alive ... and so happy to be amongst decent, everyday people,' says woman

A British couple kid-napped off their private yacht by Somali pirates more than a year ago were set free yesterday, ending one of the most drawn-out and dramatic hostage situations since the rash of piracy began off East Africa.

Paul and Rachel Chandler looked relaxed and smiled through a small ceremony held in the Somali town of Adado after their morning release. They arrived in Kenya's capital of Nairobi by nightfall, landing at the military wing of the main international airport. Rachel Chandler told The Associated Press phone: "We are happy to Despite an international flotilla of warships and aircraft, pirates continue to prowl the Indian Ocean off Somalia seemingly at will, pouncing on pleas-ure craft, fishing vessels and huge cargo ships.

They were held hostage for 388 days.

Efforts to free the couple by the Somali diaspothe Mogadishu-based government and Britain had failed until now.

Parents' views on drugs don't match reality: Study

Most parents believe their teens are staying away from illegal drugs and prescription painkillers, a new survey suggests, but that might not reflect what's actually going on.

The Canadian Centre on Substance Abuse commissioned the survey, which discovered 70 per cent of the parents polled who have children between 12 and 17 don't think their kids have experimented with drugs.

Eighty per cent of parents and non-parents said they're confident they'd recognize signs of drug use in someone close to them, according to the responses of 1,002 Canadians surveyed by Harris-Decima from Oct. 28-31. Results of the telephone omnibus survey, released today, included 131 parents of children aged 12-17 living in the household.

Michel Perron, CEO of the centre, said there's a gap between perceptions and reality

For example, the 2009 Ontario Student Drug Use Health Survey indicated that nearly one-third of those aged 15 to 17 and almost half of those aged 18 and 19 reported using marijuana in the past year.

"I think we typically tend to assume it's somebody else's child or young adult that's doing something," Perron said.

"This is really meant to give parents a bit of a wake-up call and let them know that perhaps it is occurring in your home. ... There's opportunity for dialogue and having a discussion about what this is about with the young people in your home. It's appropriate for the parents to be aware."

One in five respondents said there were prescription painkillers in their medicine cabinets at home.

An overwhelming number of the parents — 92 per cent — said they did not believe their son or daughter had ever stolen these prescription medications from the cabinet at home, but this stands in contrast with the drug-use health survey that indicated 18 per cent of Ontario kids in Grades 7 to 12 admitted to taking such drugs from their own home for non-medicinal purposes.

"There's a real upswing in young people experimenting or using these pharmaceutical products, which are very powerful analgesics or narcotics in their own right," Perron said.

Parents' input

- Perron encouraged parents to become informed and talk to their teens about drugs, but not to treat the conversation as a "semiinguisition.'
- "Research shows time and time again that young people in their teens, particularly the 13 to 16 years range, do care very much what their parents think, so you have a strong opportunity as a parent to model behaviour, to counsel on behaviour," Perron

Job stress linked to heart attack risk in women

Stress particularly problematic when there's no opportunity for control: Study

Women with high levels of job strain have a significantly higher risk of suffering a heart attack or other adverse cardiovascular event compared to those who report less stressful work lives, a major study has found.

Researchers found a 40 per cent increased risk for heart attack, stroke, the need for invasive procedures like bypass surgery, and death from cardiovascular disease.

The risk of heart attack was almost 88 per cent higher in women with sustained on-the-job stress, while the risk of bypass surgery or other procedures, such as balloon angioplasty to open up blocked coronary arteries, was about 43 per cent higher.

Job strain, a form of psychological stress, is defined as having a demanding job but little or no decisionmaking power or opportunities to use creative skills.

The study also found that job insecurity was linked to risk factors for cardiovascular disease.

Oilsands execs lend their ears

Oilsands executives are heading to three U.S. cities this week to hear what environmental groups, business leaders and academics have to say about an industry heavily criticized for its environmental impact.

The Canadian Association of Petroleum Producers has been holding discussions in Canadian cities since the summer.

Canada is by far the largest crude supplier to the U.S., shipping some two million barrels per day south of the border. Many see the oilsands as a safe, reliable source of energy.

But the oilsands industry has come under fire, garnering the label "dirty oil" in some circles.

Critics say Alberta crude emits more carbon dioxide than other sources, damages ecosystems in northern Alberta and endangers the health of communities in the region. Over the summer, a U.S. environmental group launched a controversial advertising campaign urging tourists to "rethink" traveling to Alberta.

A number of U.S. legislators have spoken out TransCanada Corp.'s proposed Keystone XL project, a proposed pipeline expansion that will deliver vast amounts of oilsands crude to refineries on the U.S. Gulf Coast.

COMMUNITY PANELS NEED NEW RULES

Join a community association. That's our new mayor's suggestion.

> m not so sure. It costs. Where will your money go? To an organization with terrific lack of city oversight.

Community associations work like this: The city owns the community association buildings — and leases them to volunteer-run groups.

It's much cheaper than staffing them with city employ-ees, paying for upkeep. There's a quaint notion that community needs will be met.

Maybe. But reality bites. The buildings are often old and expensive to run. It's easy for a small group to gain control, have their own way, break bylaws like crazy.

How do I know? I sat on a CA board and was responsible for a $200,000 employee theft. I'm liable, so blame me.

But the city failed, too. It failed to enforce the terms of its own lease which was to approve amounts overspent over a certain amount.

The city sends representatives to CA meetings with no mandate to enforce bylaws, advise on financials — or even enforce the minor lease oversight that exists.

I was tipped off to the theft by another board member, and reported this to the Federation of Calgary Community — an organization partly funded by the city.

No one helped investigate. And the city looked the other way in the absence of three years of no audited financials.

The Calgary police haven't prosecuted the person named in our civil suit. So, there's little deterrent to steal from a community association. (Oh, and the Societies Act. A nice tax by the province. CAs register bylaws there, but there's no enforcement.)

The mayor doesn't want to place blame. He's looking for system fixes.

Blame me for failing my com-

But look at the entire system, too, Mayor Nenshi.

Join a community association? Maybe.

But to the board?

Emma Watson, who recently finished a new movie, My Week With Marilyn, talks to Metro about Harry Potter, going to college in the U.S. and her passion for ethical fashion.

What did you think of the last Harry Potter book being turned into two movies?

I'll be honest, I was like, 'Is this a money spinner?' I was very cynical and dubious about it.

Then, I talked with the producers and they said, 'Look, there's no way we can fit everything into one movie. It won't be as true to the book.'

Was this movie the most physically demanding?

Yes, especially in part two. There were days when I was in tears. More than anything, being cold and wet takes so much energy out of you.

But David (Yates, the director) said, 'It looks better when you look vulnerable. It's so much realer.'

He's right, we were these bedraggled, unlikely heroes.

But there were days when I was so tired that I would fall asleep anywhere

Did you take any souvenirs from the set?

I asked for permission to take Hermione's time turner from the third movie, and the cloak and my wand.

How does filming fit in with college?

It doesn't really, I'm not going to lie. I have to work really hard when I'm there to earn my professors' respect. I'm doing a history major. I love it.

You've also done an organic fashion line for Italian designer Alberta Ferretti. You previously did a range for ethical clothing company People Tree. Why is ethical enirs fashion so important to you? I would work for anyone for free if they are prepared to make their clothes fair trade and organic.

Nobody has any contact with the way things are made. I find it alarming that nobody questions it.

I'd love to persuade (Burberry design chief) Christopher Bailey to do even just a section of Burberry that was organic or fair trade.

It's something that I want to champion. It makes such a huge difference to the lives of the people who are making it and the environment. The impact is epic.

Emma's growing passion for ethical fashion

Fashionista Emma Watson talks about her new clothing line for Alberta Ferretti, and why ethical fashion is so important to her.

When did you cut your hair?

About three months ago – I didn't tell anyone I was going to do it. I went into a hair salon in New York, and took a couple of pictures of Mia Farrow and said 'I want to look like this.'

What are you working on, fashion-wise?

I just did an organic clothing line with Alberta Ferretti. Alberta wrote to me and said, 'I saw what you did with [ethical brand] People Tree and I think it's a great idea. Would you do something with me?' Jane Birkin was my inspiration for the collection, classic French, '60s Jane Birkin.

What is the organic and fairtrade fashion industry like?

Something like one per cent of clothing is made from organic cotton, which is a shame. It seems like environmental and ethical presence is really making its way into supermarkets and so many other areas, but for some reason people don't seem to question where their clothes are from.

What has been your most glamorous fashion moment to date?

Probably when Chanel took me to Paris to try on an outfit for a premiere. I went round Coco Chanel's apartment. I found that really overwhelming.

Of ice cream trucks & redheads

Rupert Grint, the actor who plays Harry Potter's best friend, Ron Weasley, talks to Metro about his ice cream van, and why he's happy to be a redhead.

Do you think the latest movie is too scary for Potter fans?

Kids like to be scandalized, but the films are getting darker as we're growing up and the environments are changing.

I think it's much harsher on all the characters given they're in a new environment, they're on the run, missing their families, tired, and living in this little tent together.

What was memorable about filming this movie?

The day we filmed on Piccadilly Circus, we closed down the busiest part of London.

That was quite surreal, just to think that we had the power to do that.

It is true that you brought your ice cream truck on the last day of filming?

Yes, me and Emma [Watson] served ice cream. I'm not really sure why I bought it. It was always a childhood dream. All I wanted to do was be an ice cream man.

You've signed to an agency. Are you ready to move on from Harry Potter?

It's not quite finished, as there's promotion to do. But, as much as I'll miss it, I'm ready to move on.

I'm keen to do different things and establish a bit of a detachment from Potter

How does it feel being a role model for redheads?

It's funny, the reaction I get from the ginger community. People with red hair get a hard time, but I've always managed to escape it. I've never had any negative reaction to it.

I'm a very proud ginger. Ginger people in the street shake my hand and it's nice.

Do fans recognize you?

Yes, over the years it's become more of a regular thing and with my hair, I stand out.

I went to a music festival this year, and I wore a duck head. It was like having the power of invisibility, strangely.

Mel speaks out

• 'I have never and would never hurt Lucia,' says actor-director about ex-girlfriend's allegations of infant daughter abuse

As the court battle rages on between Mel Gibson and Oksana Grigorieva, the Oscar-winning actor and director is finally speaking out about some of the claims made against him about endangering his infant daughter, according to Radar Online.

"Among these false statements are allegations by Oksana that I hurt Lucia and that I have made threats to hurt or even to kill our daughter," Gibson says in a court filing obtained by the website

"I have never and would never hurt Lucia and I have most certainly never threatened to do so. My children are the most precious part of my life."

Texting teens

Teens who text 120 times a day or more — and there seems to be a lot of them — are more likely to have had sex or used alcohol and drugs than kids who don't send as many messages, according to provocative new research.

The study's authors are not suggesting that "hyper-texting" leads to sex, drinking or drugs, but say it's startling to see an apparent link between excessive messaging and that kind of risky behaviour.

Handling a defiant teenager

◆ There are a number of ways to reach out to your kids without losing your cool

You make rules, they break them. You ask questions, they ignore you. You say, "Do this," they say, "Make me!"

Oppositional behaviour is hard enough to cope with in toddlers, but when the defiant ones are 13 or 14 years old, you can't just put them down for a nap, give them a time-out or bribe them with stickers.

So how does a parent get through to a kid who is disrespectful? Here, we offer some advice from Mary Muscari, a teacher at the Decker School of Nursing at Binghamton University in New York and co-author of Everything Parents Guide to Raising Adolescent Girls and Everything Parents Guide to Raising Adolescent Boys.

Be consistent and put all of the house rules in writing and hang it up in the house.

If you're looking to improve a specific behaviour or meet a goal, write up a contract and have your child sign it.

Muscari says that it's common for adolescents to do a lot of testing. "'How much can I get away with?' But they don't really want to get away with things; they just want to see how far they can push their parents. They know exactly when to press your buttons."

Muscari stresses that most of this behaviour is normal, and other parents are going through it too. "You are not crazy! It's annoying, it's horrible, but it's just like when they were two years old and they said, 'Wow! Look what I can do!' Only they're 13. They might be saying, 'I hate you! But they're thinking, 'Thank God you're putting these controls on me.'"

If foul language is an issue, you might try a 25-cent fine for each curse, and make sure grown-up violators pay too. The money could be a reward for good behaviour, or teens could give it to a charity of their choice.

Muscari says encouraging teens to volunteer—even if it's only a couple times a year—can also give them some perspective. "You don't want them to be totally wrapped up in themselves," she said.

Consider how brain development affects adolescent behaviour, advises Dr. Joseph Shrand, psychiatrist:

- Limbic system The part of the brain that controls emotions, which allows us to fell pleasure, anger and passion, works fine in adolescents.
- So when a kid treats a parent disrespectfully, don't respond with anger, but use empathy, respect and humour.

Parents snooping on tech-savvy teens

Like many parents of tech-savvy teens, one Winnipeg dad took steps to keep an eye on his son's online activities.

He befriended his son on Facebook to keep track of the boy's wall postings.

He looked at his son's cell phone bill to see who he was talking to and regularly combed through his son's iPhone to see what apps were being used.

During one such iPhone sweep, he and his wife were shocked to discover their son was using an app called textPlus to secretly send text messages to arrange to buy drugs. The app uses wi-fi connections to send and receive messages, so users don't eat up their message allotment with their monthly wireless plans.

"We didn't know that that was possible," the father, who asked that his name not be used, recalls. "There's no fee for the text message, so there's no bill that comes to the parent."

His case is not unique. A survey conducted earlier this year by Truste, a California-based online privacy firm, suggests 72 per cent of parents monitor the online activities of their teenage children.

But how successful they can be with ever-expanding communication options — cell phones, email, chat, text messaging and more — is another matter.

GARBURATE 10 MC

We have a garburator in our kitchen but we're thinking about composting in our backyard. What's the eco-friendlier option?

Steve in St. Albert, Alberta

opularized in the 70s and '80s, garburators are starting to go out of style. A banana last peel or night's dinner can increase the load on city sewage systems, putting an strain on treatment plants.

Some cities have banned garburators all together for this very reason.

Retiring your kitchen

garburator means you won't waste energy every time you flip that switch and you won't waste a huge amount of perfectly good drinking water either.

Backvard composting is a much better solution from an environmental perspective, and it will save you money on your utility bills.

Of course, either option is preferable to throwing organic waste into the land-fill.

Building a female friendly world

Women are taking over the workforce, or, at least, they're finally getting the representation they've been fighting for.

In his book, What Women Want, author Paco Underhill writes that "We live in a world that is owned by men, designed by men, and managed by men, and yet we expect women to be active participants in it." Thankfully, this is changing.

Colleges and universities in the United States and Canada see 60 women to every 40 men, and in a range of disciplines such as law, medicine and architecture — formerly male dominated careers. Underhill says this is a trend that began in the 1970s.

Outside of the work sphere women are the key buyers for the house hold and the buyers of food for the family. And because of this, we saw the growth of the farmers market and organic food movement.

Underghill points to one statistic from 2005. "For the first time in history, young women under the age of 30 in the largest American cities overtook men in earning power."

In a New York City survey of wage earners between the ages of 21 and 30, women took home 17 per cent more pay than their male counterparts in equivalent positions.

Underhill points out

Underfill points out that there are a number of driving factors that have resulted in this shift, some alarming as they point to flaws in the education system.

This is a well researched and thoughtful look at why women should be considered whenever you build, design, or create just about everything.

Is real life mirroring Footloose?

Drinking, fighting and 'grinding' are causing officials across North America to cancel high school dances

This year's first dance at Glace Bay High School in Cape Breton may have been its last.

Fed up with a few students showing up seemingly drunk and hemlines getting increasingly shorter, the school became the second in the district to cancel dances until further notice.

"It's like anything else. There is a pendulum that swings and the pendulum has swung to the point where we said that it's time to put the brakes on, take a breather, talk to the kids and re-evaluate," says principal Peter Campbell.

While the beat goes on in elsewhere, a number of schools in Canada and the U.S. have been trying to crack down on provocative dancing, risque attire and underage drinking.

In Moncton, N.B., Bernice MacNaughton High School has banned so-called grinding — a sexually suggestive dance that typically involves a female dancing in front of a male, back to front. Students there are required to dance face to face, says principal Gary Wilson.

Two years ago, students at Eastern Shore District High School in Musquodoboit Harbour, N.S., had to agree in writing to follow certain rules, including being drug- and alcohol-free and abstaining from grinding. But the Halifax Regional School Board says the school scuttled the contract and dances when too many students refused to sign the document. The school still holds proms.

In West Hollywood, Calif., administrators at Pacific Hills School have reportedly been known to threaten students who insist on dancing sexily with Burt Bacharach tunes.

Back in Cape Breton, Whitney Pier Memorial High Junior scrapped dances earlier this year because of "inappropriate behaviour," says Charles Sheppard, a co-ordinator with the Cape Breton-Vic-Regional School Board. Sheppard wouldn't say what behaviour led to the decision.

Campbell, who's been the principal at Glace Bay High for four years, says his office hasn't received any complaints from students since cancelling the dances in September.

"(Students) didn't like the way things were moving either." he says. "The vast majority of kids want to come to the dance and just have a bit of fun. They don't like it when there is stress, they don't like it when teachers have to be cross, they don't like it when they see kids drinking too much."

The dance, which was open to students from other schools, was chaperoned by staff members and private security, says Campbell. Police officers were also on hand.

Jeana Wilson, co-president of the school's student council, says students were warned of the consequences of breaking the rules well in advance and she ultimately respects the decision that was made.

But the 17-year-old says she believes punishing the entire student body for the actions of some was a bit heavy-handed.

While she agrees that rules need to be put in place, Wilson chalks up some of the outcry over student behaviour — particularly the dress code — to a generational gap.

to a generational gap.

"Some of the things are completely inappropriate, especially what some girls wear," says Wilson, a Grade 12 student. "But some of the things I just don't think the teachers are really used to because they didn't grow up that way, wearing the kinds of things that some of us do."

What was really of concern, says Wilson, was the safety of students after fights broke out outside the dance.

Learning to talk after transitioning

Nicole Hatch had spent six figures on her transition from male to female, including flying to Thailand for sexual reassignment surgery and spending at least $20,000 on facial hair removal.

But her voice still gave her away — callers would refer to her as "sir" when she answered the phone.

So Hatch came to the University of North Carolina at Greensboro (UNCG), where speech pathologists teach transgender people how to speak like the gender they're becoming.

"To me, there's nothing worse than seeing someone dressed as a woman, a beautiful woman," Hatch, 57, says. "Then she opens her mouth and she sounds like a sailor. It's very off-putting for people."

The former Florida chiropractor took eight private classes at UNCG, learning to redirect her voice through the front of her mouth instead of her throat or chest so that she sounds more feminine. "Voice is, I would say, 50 per cent of being able to pass," Hatch said.

In a program that began 12 years ago, each semester speech pathologists at UNCG's School of Health and Human Performance work with about eight or so transgender people, says Dean Celia Hooper, who taught the transgender voice classes at UNCG for five years until she became dean in 2008.

the gender they weren't born into — are a tiny part of the work of UNCG's speech and hearing centre. The classes concentrate a lot on pitch, but the clients also learn about loudness, quality of voice and movement, especially facial and hand gestures.

Women use more adjectives, and they gesture more with the hands and use their face more to express feelings, Hooper said. During one activity, clients describe the art on the walls.

"And women will say, 'That's a beautiful picture, I see a bubbling stream.' They'll really elaborate, Hooper says. "Men will just say, 'I see a house and a car.' And then women add, 'It's just a fabulous-looking house.'"

The differences in word choice are rarely more evidence than in the how-to-give-directions project. The teacher tells clients to give directions on getting from point A to point B. Then they get handouts that compare male directions to those given by females.

Women use landmarks, while men use a compass.

A woman might say, "When you get to the red house with the blue shutters, take a right, go three miles. You'll go past the store, you'll see a cornfield. You'll see a beautiful fire station. It's new, you know, they just built it last week. Then you turn left."

A man, however, would say, "Go west three miles, take a left at this road, go four miles, take a right."

"It's just minimal," Hooper said.

Hatch says her life in the gay community — she lived as a homosexual man for about 10 years meant she needed help only with pitch.

Jason Clermont's 24-yard touchdown catch in double overtime gave Saskatchewan Roughriders a 41-38 win over the B.C. Lions in the CFL West Division semifinal yesterday afternoon.

Darian Durant found the slotback over the middle and Clermont ran in for the winning score, sending the Roughriders to the West Division final against the Calgary Stampeders for the second year in a row.

It also capped an after-

The Roughriders held a 27-20 lead in the final minute of regulation when Travis Lulay, only five games into his tenure as the Lions' undisputed No. 1 quarterback, connected with Emmanuel Arceneaux in the end zone on a 29yard pass with no time left on the clock.

Andrew Schultz,

Today's horoscope

T Aries March 21-April 20

Avoid the temptation to take risks that don't need to be taken. While what you get out of life may be related to what you put in, you don't have to risk everything.

¥ Taurus April 21-May 21

Have you noticed that your current situation bears an uncanny resemblance to what you've been through before? You should by now then know how to handle it.

II Gemini May 22-June 21

What's done is done and cannot be undone, so forget about yesterday, last week, last month or last year. Each day is a new beginning and what you start today could, should and will be amazing

Gancer June 22-July 22 Cancerians may not be the most daring members of the zodiac but you are in your own way ambitious and with Jupiter boosting your courage today vou won't hesitate to take a chance of some kind.

Ω Leo July 23-Aug.23 You like to get your own way, and most of the time you do, but the planets urge you to meet others halfway, especially if you have several projects on the go at the same time.

MP Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 Anyone who tries to engage you in idle chatter or malicious gossip will soon learn you are not in the mood to play games. You have important things to do, stay focused.

← Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Today's Sun-Jupiter link will help you find ways to ease your cash flow crisis, though the fact is you are not nearly as badly off as you think you are. However, you must save money, not spend it.

M Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 You are smart enough to realize there will always be new things to learn. What you learn today will expand your awareness and open your eyes to new possibilities.

Nov. 23-Dec. 21 If you are adrift in a sea of troubles you'll still find reasons to smile. Your life is pretty good at the moment, and about to get infinitely better..

り Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20

Everything that happens in your life is part of the grand design. Once you understand that fact at the deepest level you won't worry so much about day-to-day problems.

Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Your prospects are good and getting better by the minute. Be selective. Aim always for quality and excellence.

H Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 A belief you have always taken for granted will be put under the spotlight today and you may be surprised to discover it no longer stands up to scrutiny. Fortunately it won't be too traumatic. There are other beliefs you can cling to.
